

Nissan Forum concept

Nissan released a sketch of the Forum, a concept vehicle the firm will unveil at the Detroit Motor Show in January.

Nissan released a sketch of the Forum, a concept vehicle the firm will unveil at the Detroit Motor Show in January.

Created at Nissan Design America, the Forum concept offers innovations such as trackless sliding doors and no B-pillars. It is said to 'explore the next generation of family transportation'. While we're not exactly sure what that entails, it's probably safe to assume that the concept will feature some of the styling cues seen on the company's concept cars unveiled in Tokyo. We'll keep you updated in our Detroit Auto Show Highlights once we've seen it in the metal.

By Carsdesignnews